

The Acknowledgement Form of Warning and Requirements for Investing in Leveraged/Inverse ETFs (L&I ETFs)

I, (Mr/Mrs/Miss/Company).....

Account number.....

☐ I hereby confirm that I am aware of the characteristic and product risks of L&I ETFs as follows:

- Leveraged ETF: A fund that aims to provide a daily return as a multiple of its benchmark index's movement. For example, a 2X fund aims for a return of two times the change in the benchmark index.
- Inverse ETF: A fund that aims to provide a daily return in the opposite direction of its benchmark index. For example, a -1X fund aims for approximately a 1% increase if the index drops by 1%. A -2X fund aims for approximately a 2% increase if the index drops by 1%.

Warning: L&I ETFs are designed for short-term investment. They aim to provide returns proportional to the benchmark index on a daily reset basis. The returns are calculated using a compounding effect, which means holding the fund for more than one day may cause the returns to deviate from the intended proportion of the index's change, especially in volatile market. Additionally, management fees and other related expenses may cause the fund's returns to differ from the index's changes.
